KEY MANAGEMENT MESSAGES

Merger Overview

- The transaction, expected to close later this year, will combine AGL Resources Inc. and Nicor Inc. to create a leading U.S. natural gas distribution company.
- AGL Resources and Nicor have highly complementary businesses, strong reputations and shared values. The increased scale and scope of the combined company is expected to create long term benefits for customers and establish a growth platform superior to what either company could achieve alone.
- Until the merger closes, both companies will continue to operate independently and conduct business as usual with customers, vendors and marketing partners.

Approval Process

- The companies have received approval or clearance from the following federal agencies: the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice.
- In June, the shareholders of both companies approved the merger and all proposals required to execute the merger.
- The merger still requires approval from the Illinois Commerce Commission, the state agency that regulates Nicor and establishes rates. We believe the case for combining the companies is compelling and are working diligently through the regulatory process to secure the necessary approvals to complete the transaction in the second half of this year.

Integration Planning Process

- A Transition Committee, which includes officers from both companies, is in place to oversee the process of combining the two companies. Functional integration planning teams, with participants from both companies, have also been created to develop, recommend and design optimal operating models across all functional areas of the combined company.

- The integration planning teams will evaluate a range of strategies as they determine how to blend the best of both companies. In some functional areas, it may make the most sense to preserve the way business is done today with little change proposed. In others, combining key elements of the operations of both companies into a new operating model may be the best strategic option. And in still others, we hope to have the opportunity to transform the business by designing models that stretch the boundaries of what either company can accomplish today and set the stage for a new era of growth.
- The detailed operating model designs developed by the integration planning teams will serve as blueprints for how the companies will work together in a coordinated and integrated manner as a single entity after the merger closes.
- The focus of the integration process is not headcount reduction. Inevitably, however, some people and positions will be affected in order to successfully combine the two companies. The Transition Committee and integration planning teams will work diligently to minimize the impact to employees.
- Throughout this process, it is important that our current business continue to thrive. We must remain focused on what we do best – working together to provide safe, reliable and cost-effective service to our customers.
