UNILEVER FURTHER STRENGTHENS HOME & PERSONAL CARE BUSINESS

EU Competition Authorities approve Unilever's acquisition of Sara Lee Personal Care and European Laundry business

November 17th, London - Unilever has today received clearance from the European Commission for its acquisition of the Personal Care and European Laundry business of the Sara Lee Corporation. Unilever will complete the transaction in 2010, significantly strengthening both regional and local positions in Personal Care by adding number one brands including Radox, Duschdas and Neutral.

The acquisition of these market winning brands complements Unilever's existing category leading portfolio of brands such as Axe, Dove and Rexona. With this extended range, the business can cover a wider spectrum of price points and better meet the demands of more consumers in more markets. As a result, Unilever expects to be able to stimulate further growth in an intensely competitive market.

Approval of the transaction follows the satisfactory completion of a detailed review by the European Commission. This approval is contingent upon Unilever undertaking to divest the Sanex brand in the European Economic Area.

Doug Baillie, President of Western Europe said: "We are pleased to have received the green light from the European Commission for this deal and we look forward to adding these important brands to our business. Home and Personal Care is a key growth category and we are acquiring a number of leading brands that fill gaps in our portfolio, improve the shape of our overall European portfolio, while offering significant potential for development in other geographies."

In addition to Radox, Duschdas and Neutral, the deal includes local category leaders such as Biotex in Laundry, Zwitsal and Fissan in Baby Care and Prodent and Zendium in Oral Care. Together these brands will enhance Unilever's category mix and deliver breadth and depth to its already very successful portfolio.
