Dear <dynamic field pulls EE Name>,

I am very pleased to tell you that today we announced an agreement to acquire Valspar for $11.3 billion. A copy of the press release [hyperlink], a list of FAQs [hyperlink] and a fact sheet [hyperlink] are available on mySherwin.com [hyperlink].

This is a transformative transaction for Sherwin-Williams that will bring significant opportunities to our company and our customers, shareholders, and employees. As you know, Valspar is a highly-respected manufacturer of architectural paints, wood coatings, and industrial finishes. Valspar has approximately 11,000 employees in more than 100 countries and offers a broad range of products for consumers and customers in the construction, industrial, packaging, and transportation sectors.

Sherwin-Williams and Valspar have highly complementary product offerings, when combined will firmly establish Sherwin-Williams as a premier global paints and coatings provider. As a result of this transaction, we will be able to provide customers with a broader portfolio of brands and technologies, including capabilities in the packaging and coil segments. The acquisition will expand our global footprint with scale and enable a platform for growth across China, Australia and New Zealand, as well as enhance our R&D capabilities. In short, we will have increased product range, reach, and development that will deliver value to all of our customers and partners.

The transaction is expected to close in early 2017, following regulatory and Valspar shareholder approvals. Until then, Sherwin-Williams and Valspar will continue to operate as separate companies. It is important to remember that until the transaction closes, it is business as usual that means any interaction with Valspar employees would be inappropriate.

Importantly, this combination is an excellent cultural fit. Like Sherwin-Williams, Valspar has a long history of innovation and commitment to providing its customers with excellent products and I know that when the time comes you will all welcome their employees into our Sherwin-Williams family. When the transaction closes we will work to seamlessly integrate our two companies, but we do not expect significant changes for the vast majority of our employees.

During this exciting and historic time for our company, I ask that you stay focused on delivering the high-quality products and services our customers have come to expect. Today's announcement will likely generate considerable media coverage. If you receive any inquiries from the media or other third parties, please explain that you are not in a position to comment, gather their contact information and let them know a Company representative will get back to them. Forward all inquires to Mike Conway, Director, Corporate Communications by phone at his office (216) 515-4393, cell (216) 978-1074 or by email at mike.conway@sherwin.com.

We will continue to keep you informed and provide you with updates as this process unfolds. In the interim, please know that I am deeply grateful for the contribution you make each and every day. Without your efforts, Sherwin-Williams would not be the great company it is today.

Sincerely,

John G. Morikis

President and Chief Executive Officer
