Cafaro Says American Realty Healthcare Deal Enhances Ventas' Competitive Position

By Allen Kenney

Debra Cafaro, chairman and CEO of health care REIT Ventas, Inc. (NYSE: VTR), joined REIT.com for a CEO Spotlight video interview during REITWeek 2014: NAREIT's Investor Forum, held in New York.

Ventas has made news this summer through a series of transactions. On June 2, Ventas announced two separate deals: the acquisition of American Realty Capital Healthcare Trust (NYSE: HCT) and a group of Canadian properties from Holiday Retirement. The American Realty Capital Healthcare Trust transaction solidified Ventas' position as the leading medical office building franchise and senior living franchise globally, according to Cafaro. The Holiday deal will bring nearly 30 independent living properties into Ventas' portfolio.

Cafaro was asked about Ventas' ability to grow its funds from operations (FFO). Cafaro said the company emphasizes increasing cash flow, dividends and FFO.

We really pride ourselves on being able to consistently grow through all kinds of environments, she said.

Cafaro noted that Ventas' FFO gains are coming from multiple aspects of the company's business. First, Ventas is growing internally, which comes from having productive assets, according to Cafaro. Second, Cafaro said Ventas is refinancing at lower interest rates. Third, the firm is working on development and redevelopment, she noted. Finally, Cafaro said the company is using transactions as a source of external growth.

When you put all that together, that's how we've been able to grow FFO consistently and dividends consistently over a very long period of time, Cafaro said.

Cafaro also discussed Ventas' approach to growing internationally.

I really believe that international expansion can be an important part of the evolution of our growth and diversification strategy, she said.

Cafaro said the firm is looking at two specific types of markets. First, Ventas is interested in markets that have aging demographics with well-developed health care and rule of law. The firm is also exploring developed democracies with a burgeoning middle class and underserved health care infrastructure.

Cafaro noted that with the acquisition of the Holiday properties, international operations will account for approximately 5 percent of Ventas net operating income.

June 3, 2014 REIT.com CEO Spotlight Interview Transcript

Matthew Bechard - NAREIT Vice President, Publications

I am Matt Bechard with REIT.com here in New York City for REIT Week 2014. Joining me for this CEO Spotlight is Debra Cafaro, Chairman & CEO of Ventas. Deb, thanks so much for joining us.

Debra Cafaro - Ventas, Inc. Chairman and CEO

Glad to be here.

Matthew Bechard - NAREIT Vice President, Publications

Well, I think the logical place to start is, you've been in the news a little bit lately. Can you tell us about the deals?

Debra Cafaro - Ventas, Inc. Chairman and CEO

Yes, Ventas just announced $3.8 billion of accretive transactions on Monday morning in two separate deals. One, we're acquiring publicly traded HCT and solidifying our position as the leading medical office building franchise and senior living franchise globally. We are also acquiring, for $900 million, the Holiday Canada portfolio, 29 independent living communities in Canada. And, for clarification, the HCT transaction is about a 2.6 billion enterprise value transaction. It's a stock for stock deal, so very balance sheet friendly and also in the HCT transaction there is a very exciting pipeline of additional potential transactions of over $250 million. Again, mostly senior housing and MOB's.

Matthew Bechard - NAREIT Vice President, Publications

Now, one of the other big stories for Ventas lately has been your growth in FFO. Is this a story of improving operations or a more hospitable operating environment?

Debra Cafaro - Ventas, Inc. Chairman and CEO

Edgar Filing: AMERICAN REALTY CAPITAL HEALTHCARE TRUST INC - Form 425

One thing we really pride ourselves at Ventas is really growing consistently our cash flow, our dividends, and our Funds From Operations over all economic cycles. And in fact, we have grown FFO per share, I think, 10% a year for the last ten years or more. And so we really pride ourselves on being able to consistently grow through all kinds of environments and we've been able to continue that this year so far and then we hope that with the deals that we announce, again, $0.10 accretive in 2015, that we will be able to continue that.

The FFO growth is really coming from three or four important pieces. So we have excellent internal growth because we have really productive assets. We've been able to continue to refinance at consistently lower rates so we are getting interest rate savings. We're doing development and redevelopment within our portfolios so that is adding. And then, of course as I mentioned, we've done 16 billion of deals since 2011, now we are adding another 3.8 billion on top of that so there is a significant external piece. And when you put all that together, that's how we've been able to grow FFO consistently and dividends consistently over a very long period of time.

Now looking globally, what plans do you have for international expansion and how important is a local partner in those plans?

Debra Cafaro - Ventas, Inc. Chairman and CEO

Well that's a really good question. I really believe that international expansion can be an important part of the evolution of our growth and diversification strategy, which really began in 2002. And, we have identified selected international markets that have two characteristics: either they have an aging demographic in the way that we have in the U.S. and well-developed healthcare and senior care infrastructure and rule of law. So that is one category. The other category is really developed democracies where you are seeing a burgeoning middle class and an underserved healthcare infrastructure. And those would be the two types of countries Ventas would consider investing in. Right now we're in Canada, we have been in Canada since 2007; we just did a great hospital deal in the UK. And I think after the Holiday transaction, Ventas's NOI from international will be about 5% of our total portfolio.

And then secondly, to your question about partners, it's very interesting. The healthcare REITs are a little bit different than the other REITs expanding internationally. Under the REIT rules, as you know, like lodging, we always are working with a manager of our assets or a tenant of our assets who is our, we call our, operating partner. And they're the care providers typically. So in those areas, we will definitely have local partners, and we have great expertise frankly, because that is our business model. We are always working with a local care provider, whether it is domestically or internationally. And so that is quite an easy fit for us as we look at international markets, to be working with leading hospital systems and leading senior living providers.

Matthew Bechard - NAREIT Vice President, Publications

And lastly, you know, for the whole healthcare sector, the Affordable Care Act continues to sort of hang over everything. How difficult has that been to operate and is it a challenge to keep the company nimble to deal with wherever the winds may go?

Debra Cafaro - Ventas, Inc. Chairman and CEO

At Ventas we have some huge tail winds in our business, and the Affordable Care Act is one of them. We have the aging of the U.S. population, the over 85, fastest growing segment of the U.S., they of course use our skilled nursing assets and our senior living. We've got the 79 million Baby Boomers, who I am a part of, and we know that that cohort is the so-called pig through the python so a lot of demand for our medical office buildings from that cohort as they become Medicare eligible starting in 2011 and start to utilize healthcare in a more frequent basis. So we think that increases utilization for medical office. And then lastly we do have the Affordable Care Act which will bring 25 million formerly uninsured people into the healthcare system and we also think that will increase utilization of medical office. So we think it is a net positive for our business.

And, the last thing I would say is the other policy piece that is important for our business is there is a push both in the Affordable Care Act, and just generally as part of healthcare policy in the U.S., to continue to serve patients in the lowest cost, most clinically appropriate setting. And our medical office and skilled nursing assets, in many cases, are that setting. So that is another positive for our business as we look forward.

Matthew Bechard - NAREIT Vice President, Publications

Deb, thank you so much for joining us.

Debra Cafaro - Ventas, Inc. Chairman and CEO

Alright, thank you. It s a pleasure.
